The Family Doctor

Quinsy Sore Throat Heals Promptly After Doctor Pierces Abscess

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

If a person with acute tonsillitis goes to bed promptly and applies the remedies his doctor recommends, he usually will recover without much trouble. In such cases, application of an icebag will bring relief from pain. A gargle with baking soda will help to remove the mucus.

The doctor will prescribe remedies which may be taken internally and which will diminish pain and help to overcome the infection. In many instances the doctor may apply with a swab, directly on the surface of the tonsils, antiseptic substances which destroy germs.

The swollen tonsils will return to normal size after the patient becomes better. However, in some cases, the germs are so violent, or the infection becomes located in such a spot on or around the tonsils, that an abscess develops. The resultant condition is commonly called quinsy, or quinsy sore throat.

In these cases, the swelling, stiffness, soreness of the mouth and the difficulty cause the victim to speak in a hoarse voice, and will interfere with his chewing and swallowing.

A patient with quinsy sore throat suffers a good deal of pain which frequently is related to the ear. Moreover, his fever and the difficulty of eating or swallowing, as well as sleeping, soon will cause him to grow weak and lose weight.

No one can treat his own quinsy. When a doctor investigates the condition, he locates the abscesses in the throat and, as soon as seems desirable, pierces them with a suitable implement. The moment the infectious material is released from the abscess, the pain stops, the swelling in the throat goes down, and the patient is able to eat, drink, and sleep.

The rapidity of recovery from quinsy following this procedure is so prompt that it seems almost miraculous. Occasionally a quinsy or peritonsillar abscess becomes ripe, like a boil or abscess, elsewhere in the body and bursts of its own accord.

It is not wise to wait for this, however, as the blood may pick up the germs and carry them elsewhere in the body where they may set up secondary infections.

Four Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Dad Lets Mother Shoulder Odium for Discipline.

Mrs. Brown says to Bobby, "It is eight o'clock, dear." And of course Bobby says, "Aw, Mom." And of course, too, Mr. Brown goes on reading his paper.

Mrs. Brown says, "You aren't very strong yet after your illness last week and it's best for you to get plenty of sleep."

Bobby says, "But, Mom, I just have two pages to finish this chapter." And his mother says, "All right. But the minute you are through with it, off you hop." And dad goes on reading his paper.

In ten minutes Mrs. Brown remarks that certainly the chapter should be finished. And Bobby, with the pirate at the end of a mast, doesn't answer. So she repeats the sentence and this time Bobby says, "Um, hum." And goes on reading. So does Mr. Brown.

"I declare," cries Mrs. B., "this is just too much. You two make me do all the unpleasant things about this house. I am so tired hauling everybody round to do his duty that I could scream."

One-Sided Responsibility
"Why, what's the matter, mother?" Don't want to know.
"You. You're what's the matter. Why don't you make your son go to bed? Why do you always let me take every bit of responsibility about this house? Why didn't you say that Louise couldn't go to the movie tonight?"

"Well, you let her go didn't you?" "Bobby, go up to bed this minute." When he had gone out of carport, Mrs. Brown opened up her mind and said this: "Just because I'm so tired of having the children think that I am always the spoil sport. They never hear a word of command from you. Therefore I have to be the one to make them foot the line. They think I'm terribly fussy and cranky, when I'm only trying to do what is best for them."

Mother Needs a Break, Too
"Yes, you do. The other day when I told Bobby he could not have any corn, when he was on his diet, you said a little wouldn't hurt him. And then his fever went up. It was just a little thing, but when you do decide to put in an order, it's usually something to favor the children. I was surprised tonight when you didn't say that the movie was all right for Louise. It wasn't all right, but I let her go because I won't have the children under the impression that I, and I alone want them to be deprived of fun."

Mr. Brown thought a minute. "You mean that I should take a hand in disciplining too? I thought one was enough."

"Don't you see, John, that parents have to work together? Once in awhile, why don't you set your foot down, and let me be the one to say, 'Now, Daddy, this once wouldn't hurt anything.' Sort of give me a break, you know. I wanted Bobby to finish his book, too. But he just had to go to bed."

"I see," said John. "I'll give Louise fits when she comes home." And Mrs. Brown cried, "Oh, you men. You don't get the idea at all. Never mind. I'll attend to everything. Go on, and read your paper. Just leave it to me. I can manage."

HOLLYWOOD

By Paul Harrison

Tabloid Interviews: Grace Moore on Diet Evil... Ed Horton Favors Toper Roles

HOLLYWOOD.—One-minute interviews: "Diet has caused more divorces in this town than anything else," said Grace Moore. "Underneath weakens systems and fringes nerves. Underfed people get irritable. That's why so many Hollywood romances go on the rocks."

Ruby Keeler: "When I practice my routines for a picture, I wear heavy shoes, about twice the weight of the ones I use when I want to dance my best. Then, when I dance before the camera, my feet feel so much lighter that I can really go to town."

Edward Everett Horton: "I'm not much of a drinking man, but I do like to play intoxicated characters. They always get laughs. But it takes a very sober man to be a funny drunk on the screen. A person who's really drunk only thinks he's funny."

Stuart Erwin: "Somebody's got to start a campaign against women wearing hats in theaters. For the last six months, when I've gone to movies, I haven't seen anything but the upper corners of the screen. Maybe they ought to get out those old slides reading, 'Ladies, Please Remove Your Hats.'"

Johnny Weissmuller: "I'd like to put my leopard skin in mothballs and wear evening clothes in a picture for a change. It isn't that I mind uncivilized roles, but I'd just as soon be uncivilized in a drawing room."

Catching On
Carole Lombard: "As an actress, I think I'm something like an automobile. No, I don't mean that I can be driven just so far. I mean that a car has to be driven a certain number of miles before it's broken in properly and really begins to perform. After 10 years before the camera, I believe I'm just getting broken in and learning to loosen up in my portrayals."

Charles Butterworth: "If some studio doesn't come along with a good healthy role for me pretty soon, fans will begin sending me cod liver oil and tonics. Actually, I'm quite husky, except that I do have insomnia."

Clark Gable: "Romance has made more history than armies. Take sex out of life and this would be a very dull world."

Chico Marx: "I'm not really Italian. I only look that way because my parents were Italians. Or were they? Anyway, my father performed a good service for the Italians; he was the first one to think of stuffing mearoni with bicarbonate of soda."

Grover Jones: "People like to laugh at the business of making movies. They say it's crazy, it's infantile, it's nuts. And they're right—it's cockeyed. But, boy, it's the greatest game in the world, and I love it!"

Hugh Herbert: "There is absolutely no truth in the report that I'm going to have my face lifted."

The diplomatic service doesn't pay very well, but diplomatic training is valuable in getting a good job in Hollywood. Some of the eastern talent scouts for the movies try to keep an eye on the youngsters who are studying for careers in the foreign service. There is that these students have considerable poise and assurance, together with good speaking voices, and are likely recruits for the thinning ranks of Hollywood leading men.

Michael Fitzmaurice studied at Trinity College, Dublin, for the British diplomatic corps. He was in London waiting for an appointment when Noel Coward persuaded him to try the stage. He did, and soon landed in Hollywood.

William Hall, another Universal actor, financed a diplomatic course at Georgetown University by singing with orchestras. But the radio got him before he could be shipped to a consulate in Latvia, or Ecuador, or wherever he had been destined to go.

Paul Cavanaugh was assistant legislative counsel for the Province of Alberta before he went into the movies. And Sir Guy Standing was knighted for a diplomatic mission to the United States during the war.

what developed. So he asked casually: "Have any of the servants seen him going out of the house? He may be outside somewhere."

"Come on. We'll ask them," answered Pearl John, as though he were glad to have company.

A TOUR of the servants' quarters brought only negative grunts and head shakings, and, since most of the others were about when they returned, Pearl John had a chance to ask what they knew of Pearl Pierre's whereabouts.

"Maybe he's gone down to the city, now that the road is open," Professor Shaw suggested.

"I'm sure he hasn't," the younger brother said quickly. "You think, then, that we had better make a search of the house?" asked Ramon. "And perhaps the cellars? Where do you go downstairs from this floor?"

Pearl John did not answer this last question directly. He only said, "I've had the basement searched already. He's not there." Angelique and Betty came into the room just then.

"Good morning. Where's Pearl Pierre?" asked Angelique.

"We were wondering if he wasn't with you some place," Bob tried to keep his voice casual.

"He? Why?" she asked cooly. "I haven't seen Pearl Pierre since we all said goodnight here."

"That's pretty good, too," thought Bob as he looked at her curiously. Where had she been with Pearl Pierre when he saw them in the hall outside his door? And how about her trailing softly after de Forest when he opened the mysterious door that was always kept locked?

The Indian guard, coming to the door just then, claimed Pearl John's attention, and they all heard Broken Shield say that nobody had gone down the trail to the plains since the road was opened the day before.

After he had gone Pearl John came back into the room, looking very much disturbed. "I think we had better start to look for him here," he said. "If he's not in the house, we'll search the mesa."

Accordingly every door in the hacienda was opened and each room looked over very thoroughly, except for the locked door with the lion's head knocker.

"That leads down cellar and I've already had a search made there," Pearl John repeated when someone spoke of it.

It was lunch time before they finished, and Pearl John insisted that they should eat the meal before they started outside.

"I think the girls had better not come with us," said Pearl John as they rose from the table. "It's cold and threatening outside."

"Oh, please!" begged Angelique. "It gives me the creeps to stay in here alone, doesn't it you, Betty? And Tante Josephine will be all right for a little while. She's taking a nap and a maid is with her."

UNDER protest, Pearl John finally consented and soon they were all trooping through the snow, searching for something—but what?

The Indian was still in the patio and Pearl John ordered him to come along. As they came to the ash pile where the Christmas greens had been burned, Angelique and Ramon both eyed it closely, but now there was nothing but a blackened heap.

They went on to the rocky place where the two had watched Pearl Pierre poking about in the cindeas, and the girl looked at Ramon. He did not see her; instead he was staring down over the side where a black object lay crumpled on the crags below.

With a cry, Angelique saw it, too, and drew back, pointing a shaking hand. "There! Down there!"

Pearl Pierre was certainly down there, lying very still and sprawled grotesquely on the bare rocks. After the first shock Bob raced back to the house for a stout rope. When he returned Pearl John ordered the Indian to go down over the edge of the cliff. The man protested, but de Forest was firm.

"Do as I tell you, Broken Shield, or, by Heaven, it'll be the last time you ever refuse to do anything!" he exclaimed with sudden fury, and watched as the Indian slipped the noose under his arms, and the other end was looped about a point of rock.

Slowly the descent was made, and then everyone lent a hand to help bring the double burden back up to the surface of the mesa. Inch by inch, the rope was drawn up until the Indian's head appeared. Eager hands drew him to safety and they all stood breathless while Pearl Pierre's lifeless body was laid on the snow.

Then all eyes fastened on something black sticking in his throat. The obsidian knife again!

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catten

Many New Children's Books Will Interest Adults, Too

Periodically, Bruce Catten's book review column is given over to Olive Roberts Barton, famed child training expert, for a review of the latest and best books for children. Here is another of her reviews.

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
Among the newer books for children are some that will interest adults as well.

One of these is "Listening," by Kate Seredy (Viking; $2, illustrated by the author). A little girl, Gail, is told how a New England house grew from an acorn, through generations of the energetic Dutch Van Horns, into a great house. An attractive format and a volume to possess.

An excellent book for the family to read together is "The Little Miracle," by Zoe Akins (Harcourt; 75 cents). It is a sacred drama of the boyhood of Jesus, in which His gentle mother, Mary, is urged by her friends to correct Him for running away. Mary is troubled, but her doubts are put to rest by the little miracle of the kitchen. A beautifully told story that will impress the child more than eight or 10 years old.

"Tales of Troy and Greece," by Andrew Lang (Longmans-Green; $2), illustrated by H. J. Ford, is something new in classical mythology. One might call it "Tales Every Child Should Know." Lang, long since recognized for his splendid work in adapting the best in fairy tales to the child's understanding, has another star to his credit in this book. The content is explained by the title. For children from 10 to any age.

"Nancy Alden," by Eliza Orne White (Houghton; $1.75), is another good book by this writer. Children will live the varied adventures, both sympathetic and humorous, of Nancy, the 9-year-old protagonist who first was introduced in "Leading Mary."

"East Way, West Way," by Baroness Shizue Ishimoto (Farrar and Rinehart; $1.75), is an autobiography; excerpts from a larger book of the author's girlhood in Japan. A detailed and instructive account of her experiences, from childhood games to marriage, that older girls will enjoy.

"Houses in America," by Ethel May Robinson and Thomas P. Robinson (Viking; $3.00), combines peoples, history, and their influences upon architecture in this country. A book for "keeping" Recommended as a real addition to libraries. Well told and helpfully illustrated.

Among other books for older children are these: "Audubon," by Constance Rourke (Harcourt-Bruce); "Book of Natural Wonders," by Ellison Hawks (Loring and Munsey); "Raiders of the Horde," by Merritt Parmelee Allen (Longmans-Green; $1.75), a mystery of the Civil War; "Wishbones or Backbones," by B. D. Wilhelmus (Reilly and Lee); "Wigwags and Warpaths," by Isabel Jergens (Grosset and Dunlap); and "Bepko Marlowe of Charles Town," by Elizabeth Janet Gray (Viking), a junior historical novel.

SECOND TO WASHINGTON

MOST fitting selection of a personality to be pictured alongside the portrait of George Washington, on the new one-cent Army stamp, is that of General Nathaniel Greene, the "Quaker General," who is said to have been second in ability as a war leader only to the great revolutionary commander himself.

Son of a Quaker preacher, Greene shocked his fellow Quakers by joining the revolutionary army that was forming in 1774 to resist the troops of King George III. He was 32 then. Three years later he commanded the Rhode Island division of the army of Boston, as brigadier general. At the Battle of Brandywine he saved the American forces from extermination. In 1780 he took command of the army of the South and the next year defeated the British in a decisive battle at Eutaw Springs, S. C.

For his successes, Georgia and the Carolinas awarded him grants of land, and Congress presented him with a medal of honor. Although highly honored when he returned to his home in Rhode Island, he retired with his family to his estate in Georgia. There, in 1786, at the age of 44, he died of stroke.

THE GOSPEL OF JOHN
Text: John 1:1-18

The lessons during the coming year takes us over large fields of Bible interest. After a quarter's study in the Gospel of John, we shall in the second quarter turn back to study personalities and incidents recorded in the book of Genesis. In the third quarter, we shall proceed through the book of Exodus to the story of God's part in the making of a nation.

Then, in the fourth quarter, we shall return to the New Testament for a series of studies in the Christian life. The first lesson for the year is from the prolog of John's Gospel. The philosophical and mystical exposition of the Word that was in the beginning identified with God in character and creation, the source of life and light, the Word that became flesh incarnated in Jesus of Nazareth, full of grace and truth.

John the Baptist was witness to this Bearer of Life and Light, whose way he had come to prepare; and John, the author of this gospel, sets forth in this remarkable book to bear witness both before and after the earthly ministry of Jesus. He has set himself the great task of recording the things that Jesus did and said, the fullness of which, if they were all told fill all the books of the world.

Through characters and incidents, he unfolds sentence by sentence, chapter by chapter, the testimony to Jesus, the Son of God, and to the reality of the salvation that He brought to men.

The Gospel of John presents a succession of witnesses: The witness of John the Baptist, and of Andrew, and Peter, as they bring others to Jesus that they may bear His words of love; the witness of Jesus Himself in the great words of the third chapter; the witness of His mighty works; the witness of His foes in the violence with which they opposed His work of healing and salvation; and the witness of the closing days of His life in intimate association with His disciples, with all testimony coming to a climax in His appearance to the disciples, reviving their faith.

Here in the prolog, like a well-ordered and careful writer, John is setting forth his thesis, the things that his gospel is going to prove: That Jesus came into the world as an incarnation of God, revealing life and light, giving to those who receive Him the right to become children of God, uplifting men into all the glory of their divine heritage and relationship.

It is the story of a Saviour who dwelt among men, full of grace and truth, bringing something higher than love, life and the fullness of truth and righteousness.

"No man," says the writer, "hath seen God at any time." But with this unseen God there may be the reality of a deep communion, for the Father is not seen by mortal eyes, but the eyes of the soul have seen the beauty of His love and grace.

It is a marvelous thesis. But it is no more marvelous than the life that is its proof, for not only in this gospel, but in other gospels as well we have the words of that early life of the Master. They may vary as to the nature and meaning of that life, but the world has acknowledged its richness, its beauty, and its greatness; and there are masses of men, baffled in their efforts to discover God, who have found in Him the supreme evidence of a divine and loving Father.

Fisher Resigns From Post as RFC Director

WASHINGTON, O.—(P)—President Roosevelt accepted Friday the resignation of Charles T. Fisher, Jr., of Michigan, as a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (RFC).

dustry of munitions intended for use in strikes and maintained the soft union had broken its contract with miners.

The coming year, Lewis said, would see an "unparalleled growth" in organized labor's "numerical strength." "Employers talk about possible labor trouble interfering with continued expansion and progress of industry," he said. It would be more accurate to talk about "employer trouble"—that is something from which the wage earners are suffering.

Regarding General Motors, Lewis said:

"Mr. Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of General Motors Corporation, in his published year-end summary, refers to the possibilities of industrial strife. 'Is it possible that Mr. Sloan is predicting continued hostility on the part of his corporation toward the demands of its employees for fair consideration?'"

"The giant General Motors Corporation is at present pursuing the dangerous course of refusing to answer the request of the United Automobile Workers for a national conference, for collective bargaining purposes."

New 'Gretna Green' for Yuma, Arizona

California's Film Celebrities Fly to Him for Ceremony

YUMA, Ariz.—(P)—This western Gretna Green is starting the new year with "right now" service for all-around Hollywood couples, fleeing California's "gin" marriage law.

Constable Ed Winn, who exchanges his gun for a Bible to succeed Earl A. Freeman as "marrying justice" of the peace, has a head full of plans for speeding up things.

His program calls for moving his residence from the outskirts into the middle of Yuma, and burning the lights all night as a guide to elopers.

No Waits
"These folks who want to get married in a hurry and go to the expense of chartering an airplane to bring them to Arizona aren't going to hunt all over a strange town for a justice of the peace," Winn says.

The easy-going, horse-trading former Texan plans to be ready at all hours. Through years of experience as a peace officer, he has learned to awaken easily and clothe himself quickly—there'll be no long waits on his front porch, he promises.

Some nights Yuma's thriving wedding business brings as many as 20 couples, knocking at the doors of the justice.

Freeman, who is retiring after "splicing an estimated 25,000 couples, says a decade of this sort of life has made his hair gray and broken his health.

Recently, these night-time visitors included John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie, who arrived at midnight in a chartered plane. Justice Freeman "had the knot tied in the blink of an eye."

Winn doesn't anticipate much trouble getting used to so many marriages, even though a lot of his customers will be "mighty important people." He has been watching Freeman for four years and has "picked up a lot of pointers."

He is pleased with his new job, but not excited. His election came about through a "gentleman's agreement." Freeman, deciding not to seek reelection, supported Winn.

Winn says marriages will be conducted "on the same high level." The fee will remain the same, "customarily" $5. Movie stars usually pay more, but seldom above $25. On this basis, it is estimated the office has paid Freeman about $110,000 in marriage fees alone.

It's a Good Business
Freeman, who plans to practice law and help run his wife's dairy, says he will still be available to any couples he has married, should they need a divorce. But he added that "more than 90 per cent" of his marriages have been successful.

Marriage is a business in Yuma—a mighty good one, the citizens admit. About 6,000 licenses are issued annually—which would average about one to each person in town.

Although Yuma is one of the hottest spots in the nation, it gets its quota of cupid's victims even during the summer. The hotels are air-conditioned and count it a poor day when the bridal

Pope Is Considerably Improved Vatican Says

VATICAN CITY, Rome, Italy.—(P)—Pope Pius spent a cheerful New Year's day Friday almost free from pain, the Vatican said. The pope's health, brightened with the hope of recovery. Doctors, cheered by his progress, pointed out, however, that periods of such progress sometimes turn abruptly into a relapse.

was ready for delivery and that a payoff man was being chosen.

"Everything As Desired"
"Mabel—We are ready. Everything entirely in accordance with your desires. Ann," said the advertisement. It replaced one which said Mabel—Please give us your address. Ann.

The only immediate comment was from a close friend of the family who believed the Mattsons did not expect Charles' immediate return, or that if they did they were following a federal agent's instructions and are keeping absolutely quiet about it.

Unexplained cheerfulness suddenly pervaded the Mattson home just before the new "break" became known to the outside world. Dr. Mattson remained uncommunicative, however, as reports flew about that he or his agents had met the abductor and that Charles would be released shortly.

Mysterious Movements
Mysterious errands by members of the family, unexplained lights flashing from hills overlooking the nearby town of Lasquah and the reticence of Mattson confidants presaged the new turn. The original advertisement was presented by a middle-aged woman who paid cash and ordered it published for three days, today being the last. The change was made in the noon edition.

The physician and his son William, made two trips from their home yesterday and last night. Numerous others came and went. During the morning an old model sedan bearing two men and a woman stopped near the Mattson home and asked the whereabouts of "the G-men." Directed to the house, the woman and one of the men entered and remained about five minutes.

The generals met informally in the War Ministry offices to discuss the Franco-British demand for a ban on volunteer sailings for Fascist Spain. A reliable informant said they were inclined to stress the military aspect of a venture in Spain. Blomberg, as spokesman for Hitler, cut short these discussions.

The question in Spain, he was said to have argued, is not a military one but one of politics, and it is for Hitler to decide the answer. He is for Hitler to decide the answer.

Hitler, it was believed, would reply to the Franco British notes next week.

Rebels Are Confident
WITH FASCISTS OUTSIDE MADRID.—(P)—Fascist Gen. Francisco Franco will have strong reinforcements by mid-January to aid his drive against Madrid, military leaders indicated Thursday night.

With the prospect of many months before the Fascist army can conquer, or fail to conquer, all of Spain, many here predicted Madrid itself would fall shortly with the aid of new troops—presumably from another European nation. When the reinforcements are ready, Franco's colleagues indicate a furious offensive will be ordered in an effort to end the war by spring.

Some neutral observers, however, believed the Fascist predictions were overconfident, that Madrid, which has held out eight weeks, could withstand much more siege. The Fascists attribute Madrid's resistance, thus far, to the international column, composed of Russian, Polish, Czechoslovakian and French volunteers, which has borne the brunt of recent fighting.

Rain Threatens to Mar Bowl Grid Game

87,000 to Watch Washington, Pitt

Louisiana Favored to Take Santa Clara in Sugar Bowl Classic

PASADENA, Cal.—(AP)—The eve of the annual Tournament of Roses football game found Pittsburgh and Washington ready for battle and 87,000 ticket-buyers wondering about the weather.

Pitt, representing the East, and the Washington Huskies, champions of the Pac West, will go into the New Year's Day Rose Bowl struggle on even terms. Fans will swarm into the colorful Arroyo Seco stadium for the 22nd consecutive edition of the grid spectacle on the same terms with the elements—a 50-50 gamble that they may get rain-soaked.

Jerseys Same Color
In an icy side-line controversy, the two schools tussled to a deadlock Thursday over the question of jersey colors. As a result, both teams will go into the bowl wearing jerseys of almost identical shade, the Washingtons in deep purple, Pitt in deep blue.

Sutherland said he would name his starting team Friday. It appeared likely the Pitt backfield would shape up with Chickering at quarterback, Gohlberg at right halfback, LaRue at left half and Staupis at full.

Low Clouds at New Orleans
NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—On the eve of the third annual Sugar Bowl football game, bringing together Santa Clara and Louisiana State, rain threatened to mar the New Year's Day contest.

Louisiana State remained a slight choice to conquer the powerful San Francisco eleven, defeated only by Texas Christian during 1934.

Coach Lawrence (Buck) Shaw of Santa Clara grinned as he stepped from a train here upon arrival from Houston and peered into the low-hanging clouds.

"We've had the same kind of weather from California to Louisiana," he said. "I hope it does clear up before the game."

The two squads were quarried away from the scene of the battle Thursday night, Santa Clara at Bay St. Louis and Louisiana State at Baton Rouge. They will reach New Orleans shortly before noon Friday.

Louisiana State exercised lightly and arranged to attend a motion picture in the evening. The Santa Clara squad went through a light limbering up at the St. Stanislaus College field.

Coach Bernie Moore has groomed Bill Crass, noted "touchdown" fullback, for action in the event the field is soggy. Crass, all-Southeastern player in 1933, ran 80 yards for a touchdown in the mud against Arkansas this season and is recognized as one of the hardest line busters in this section.

Marquette Is Favored
DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—A sudden switch of betting odds Thursday night made the outwitted Marquette Golden Avalanche a 6-5 favorite over Texas Christian University in the Cotton Bowl football game Friday.

Impressive last-minute workouts, top physical condition and the accurate passing of (Buzz) Bivild, all-American halfback, impressed fans who feared the Christians had reached peak form three weeks ago humbling Santa Clara. Trick Passing Expected

Some 25,000 spectators were expected to see Buivid match throws with the Christian's redoubtable Sammy Baugh in their farewell to college football.

The Christian line, averaging 201 pounds will outweight Marquette's starting line some 19 pounds to the man. The Avalanche starting backfield, however, will average five pounds per man more than the Christian offense.

"Slingin' Sam" Baugh will be without one of his star pass receivers—Willie Walls, giant, end, Meyer, fiery defensive wingman and a remarkable placement kicker, will replace Walls, injured in the Santa Clara game.

The weatherman predicted cloudy skies but probably no rain.

Duquesne Alibis in Advance
MIAMI, Fla.—(AP)—After final workouts Thursday, coaches announced probable lineups for the Orange Bowl game here Friday between Mississippi State College and Duquesne University. Coach John (Little Clipper) Smith of Duquesne said: "Naturally, our boys are going in there fighting to win. But I think that Mississippi State is a little too strong for us. The heat seems to have slowed our boys down a great deal."

Maj. Ralph Sasse, coach of Mississippi State, said: "We know we're up against one of the strongest teams in the country, but don't count us out before the game starts. We may not win, but the boys from Pittsburgh will know they've been a battle."

It will be one of the last games played in Miami's wooden stadium. A $250,000 concrete bowl is to be constructed.

Auburn Favored to Win

Long Island String Longer

Repelling Illinois Wesleyan at the New York Hippodrome, 41-29, the Long Island University team stretched its string of victories to 43, one of the longest winning streaks in basketball in recent years. Ben Kramer, forward, is shown leaping in front of two white-jerseyed Illinois players, Nos. 60 and 63, to score two points for the Brooklyn Blackbirds.

Grid Rules Okeh; Need Enforcement

Rules Should Be Enforced More Stringently, Says Conference Official

CHICAGO.—More stringent enforcement rather than change of football rules is what's needed to remedy such evils as have arisen out of forward pass interference regulations, according to John J. Shommer, veteran Western Conference official.

"This is a good rule, emphasizing more than any other the need for officials who know their business," he explains. "The official must know whether the ball or man is being played by defending players."

Thursday night and announced they were ready for Friday's "battle of the pigskins."

Auburn was slightly favored in the betting but this was attributed to the fact Auburn fans were here with money. Villanova had few home-town supporters. The odds ranged from 6 to 5 to 9 to 5.

Meager and Smith reported their squads in top physical condition but Smith was worried by the possible effect the weather might have on the Wildcats. The temperature was around 85 Thursday.

Physically there was little to choose between the two. Auburn held a slight weight advantage in the line but Villanova's backfield is much the heavier.

American Loop to Farm Out Umpires

Eddie Ainsmith, Schooled Last Year, to Join Major Loop

CHICAGO.—The American League is guarding against a lack of good umpires in the future. The circuit is farming out likely timber.

Eddie Ainsmith, former Detroit Tiger catcher, was schooled in the south last season, and will join the major loop staff this year. Two other likely farmhands are Eddie Rommel and Eddie Charrity, who now are top minor league umpires.

Meager and Smith reported their squads in top physical condition but Smith was worried by the possible effect the weather might have on the Wildcats. The temperature was around 85 Thursday.

Physically there was little to choose between the two. Auburn held a slight weight advantage in the line but Villanova's backfield is much the heavier.

Max Given Chance to Set Precedent

Win for Schmeling Would Be First Ex-Champ to Regain Title

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK.—Of all the upsets recorded in the topsy-turvy sports year of 1934 none excelled the dramatic 12th-round knockout of Joe Louis by Max Schmeling.

The stout-hearted German's surprising victory gives him a golden opportunity on next June 3 to smash pugilistic precedent to a pulp by regaining the heavyweight championship in a 15-round contest with James J. Braddock.

James J. Corbett and Jack Dempsey came mighty close, but no big fellow ever has won the title. The great majority agree with Schmeling, who plainly believes that he has a splendid chance of making bank-busting history.

When an attack of arthritis forced Braddock to postpone his appointment last fall, Schmeling rejected a $300,000 guarantee for a return engagement with Louis rather than risk the loss of another crack at the crown.

When the Braddock-Schmeling scrap was re-signed the other afternoon, each agreed to post a $25,000 forfeit binding the winner to defend the title in this country in the fall. Naturally, Louis is expected to be waiting for the survivor.

The move was designed to keep Schmeling in circulation in the event that he prevails, but not of those better acquainted with Herr Moxie suspect that retiring with the title is worth vastly more than $25,000 to the proud Pretzel Pounder. That has been Schmeling's objective ever since Gene Tunney gave him the idea.

Brown Bomber Unveiled
Louis' terrific bellow and flattening by Schmeling was traced to many things. Louis took the Black Uhlin lightly.

Smiling Joe became a bridegroom the evening that he put a lily in Max Baer's hands nine months before. Obviously, the negro wasn't right when he squared off with the Perocious Frankfurter, although just now much more his physical and mental condition had to do with the disaster than Schmeling's right hand is a question. There is no question but that both contributed to it.

All we know for certain is that when the Schmeling who had to be shown pierced the supposedly impregnable Louis armor, he found just a boy, extremely bewildered and rather easily hurt. The Louis scowl of the Levinson, Carnera, and Baer fights became an expression of intense pain.

Many suspected that Schmeling knocked all the fight out of Louis, but the Alabama-born black came back nicely against mediocre opposition. It will require sterner opposition than the Brown Bomber has tackled since to determine just what effect his whipping by Schmeling had on his future.

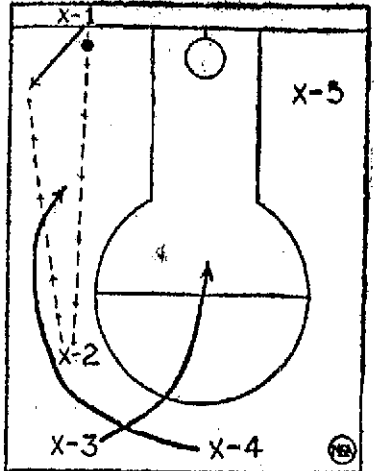

Braddock was the first heavyweight champion since Dempsey was idle from 1923 to 1926 to fail to go to the wars.

The foreign legion sent over an excellent heavyweight prospect in Gunnar Barlund of Finland, who has shown signs of going somewhere.

There have been worse large ones around than Andre Lenglet of France, Arturo Godoy of Chile, and Jorge Brescia of Argentina, the latter moved out when he was rushed against Louis Bobby Pastor, former Golden Glover and New York University back, per-

HOOPING IT UP

Out-of-Bounds Play Tangles Defense and Clears Man for Shot

By HOWARD CANN
New York University Coach

NEW YORK.—This clever out-of-bounds play is used with good results by teams in this area.

The ball is outside just below and slightly to the side of the basket. Offensive player X-2 is standing outside the foul line and giving no indication that he is about to figure in the play. He takes a toss from X-1, a dummy pass over the head of his guard.

Simultaneously, X-3 and X-4, stationed on either side of the court about five yards beyond the foul circle toward midcourt, cut for the basket. They cross each other's path, running the defensive player into the stationary man, X-2, as he throws the ball to X-1, who has come out into the court for a side set shot.

Thus the defense tangles itself into a knot and X-1 is free for a comparatively easy try.

Total Ages of Quartet of Sports Leaders 307

NEW YORK.—Sports may be for young men, but coaching sports is getting to be a business for the aged, judging from the activity of four famous leading mentors.

Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Amos Alonzo Stagg, grand old grid coach who left Chicago a couple of years ago to take over the reins at College of the Pacific, are both 74.

Jim Ten Eyck, Syracuse crew mentor, is dean of all active coaches at 80. Jack Monksley, Cornell's veteran track pilot, is the comparative youngster of the lot—73.

Hearlow Cage Pro

CHICAGO.—Bill Hearlow, University of Chicago basketball ace of last season and holder of the Big Ten three-year individual scoring record, has joined the Whiting, Ind., club of the Midwest Pro Conference.

Terry Likes Chances

NEW YORK.—Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, is willing to bet that his 1934 National League pennant winners will finish 1-2 in the circuit next season.

hops is the brightest of the American hopefuls.

Six New Champions
A half dozen new champions were crowned, the featherweight championship claimants were reduced to two in number, and one titleholder was supplanted before he had time to get acquainted with his new surroundings.

Freddie Steele of Haeoma lifted the middleweight wreath from Eddie Babe Risko of Syracuse in Seattle. After being dropped and repulsed by Tony Canzoneri some months previously, Lou Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y., took the lightweight leadership from that illustrious warrior for whom he formerly acted as sparring partner.

Pete Sarron, a slightly bald veteran of Birmingham, won one version of the featherweight championship from Freddie Miller of Cincinnati. Henry Armstrong, St. Louis negro won recommitment in California by repelling Baby Arizomendi, and then added New York to his territory by taking a debatable decision from spidery Mike Bellosio of the Bronx.

Balthazar Sangchilli of Spain lost the bantam bauble to Tony Marino of Pittsburgh on a knockout when something went wrong with his fighting equipment. Marino was deposited by Sixto Escobar of Puerto Rico. Escobar twice has been toppled in nontitle tilts by the elongated and unorthodox Harry Jeffers of Baltimore.

The welterweight championship was successfully defended for the first time in several years when Barney Ross finished in front of Izzy Junnazzo in an exhibition.

The new year starts with the Wisconsin board defying the National Boxing Commission in refusing to interfere with an encore of a Steele-Gorilla Jones affair in Milwaukee January 1. Jones, a capable colored clouter out of Memphis via Akron, has been under the ban of the national body since his unsatisfactory bout with Ben Jeby of New York in Cleveland, April 8, 1933.

Thus 1935 loses no time in furnishing another illustration of the slipshod government of boxing and the fallacy of its rules and orders.

New Leaders Take Major Golf Titles

1936 Year of New Champs, No Former Ruler Won a Big Title

By ART KRENZ
NEA Service Golf Writer

NEW YORK.—Because Great Britain came back to keep all of its major championships at home and to win the United States women's title must be reviewed from an international angle.

All Padgham succeeded, his countryman, Alf Perry, in taking the British open, and Hector Thomson ascended the British amateur throne occupied by William Lawson Little of San Francisco in 1934 and '35.

After annexing the British women's amateur, Pam Barton visited this country long enough to make it a little slam by capturing the American title. The titian-haired English miss repelled Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, 3 and 2, to become the second woman in history to prevail in both women's history to prevail in both tournaments the same season. Dorothy Campbell performed the feat for the Union Jack in 1909.

America's Curtis Cup team tied the British fair ones, 3½-3½ at Gleneagles.

The United States Walker Cup squad, with a half dozen new faces, white-washed the pick of the British amateurs, 9-0, over the exasperating Pine Valley layout. Scotty Campbell of Seattle; Harry Givan, Reynolds Smith, Ed White, Walter Emery of Oklahoma, and Charley Yates of Atlanta made their bows in the American battling order.

Little Turns Pro

Little, the first player in history to acquire both the British and American amateurs two years hand running, a trick demanding an amazing string of 18-hole match play victories turned professional. He finished 10th in the Masters' tournament at Augusta.

Little failed to qualify for the United States open, but topped the Canadian.

It was a year of new champions. No former ruler won a big title.

After threatening for several years, Johnny Fischer of Cincinnati finally broke through to succeed Little as the United States amateur king. Handicapped by a sprained ankle and playing in frightful weather, the former University of Michigan luminary rolled to win from Jack McLean, Scottish whisky salesman, after having been three down with only eight holes to play.

A record number of entries, 1278, were received for the United States open, and 170 went to the post. With conditions as balutousol the reverse of those that existed at tricky Oakmont the year before, Tony Manero, a New York professional who came to the tournament via Greensboro, N. C., prevailed with a new United States open record score of 282.

Lighthouse Harry Cooper was considered "in" when Manero came along in late afternoon with a card that lowered by four strokes the old mark established by Charles (Chick) Evans in 1916 and tied by Gene Sarazen in 1932.

Manero's victory was a surprise to many, but not to the professionals themselves. The Italian had been retarded by an ailment that made walking more than 18 holes painful. An operation corrected the trouble, and he was off to the races.

Horton Smith proved himself the master of the masters in accounting for the second of the three Masters' tournaments that have been staged. This made the Joplin star the leading money winner of the year.

Guldhall Low Scorer
Ralph Guldhall finished as the lowest-scoring American professional with an average of 11.63 for 65 rounds. Guldhall won the Western, August, Miami Biltmore and a couple more opens.

Denny Shute once more demonstrated that they pay off on accounting more than hard hitting when he repulsed Jimmy Thomson in the Professional Golfers' Association tournament at Pinehurst. It was the Ohioan's first major victory since he defeated blond Craig Wood in a playoff for the British open crown in 1933.

Fatty Beng took the Miami Biltmore and the Mason-Dixon women's tournaments, but the freckled miss bogged down late in the campaign, and found her Minneapolis chum, Beatrice Barrett, stealing some of her thunder. Dorothy Traung of San Francisco captured the women's western.

Charley Kocis of Michigan won the national intercollegiate. Paul Leslie was the victor in the western amateur. Fat Abbott, a diminutive picture extra, ankled away with the national public links crown.

Linksman Linked

The golf of Sam Parks, Jr., ought to improve considerably from now on. The Pittsburgh professional, below, who copped the 1935 National Open at Oakmont, will shoot to feed two soon. He weds Jean Davison, above, Dec. 31.

Horton Smith proved himself the master of the masters in accounting for the second of the three Masters' tournaments that have been staged. This made the Joplin star the leading money winner of the year.

Makes Real Thing Dead Easy

Bringing down a Bronko Nagurski ought to be a comparatively easy task after a tucker has worked on the above lifelike dummy, which is enough to scare the wits out of him in the first place. This new object of the gridiron gladiator's affection is suspended from a hinged arm and recoils when hit. Matty Bell of Texas Christian, Chet Wynne of Kentucky, and Hank Anderson inspect the contrivance at the New York meeting of the American Football Coaches' Association. Anderson's position at North Carolina State is the subject of a heated argument between school officials and alumni.
